

A new look Territory range has been launched in New Zealand featuring key exterior changes, fresh interior environments, a revised model-line up and a host of additional equipment now fitted as standard.

Available today, Ford New Zealand is proud to introduce the new SY Territory MK II line up, the latest iteration of the ever popular Ford SUV that has sold over 8,400 units in New Zealand over the last four years.

"The Territory has been an outstanding success for Ford since it was launched in 2004, achieving both sales success and critical acclaim over the past four and a half years, with more than 86,000 customers to date and a multitude of consumer and industry awards," Ford Australia President and CEO Marin Burela said.

"Territory has proven immensely popular with consumers who love its car-like handling, spacious and flexible interior, stylish design and high levels of occupant safety."

"The new look Territory builds on these great attributes, while taking the next step in its evolution with a revised exterior design, fresh interior appointments and a host of new equipment."

The revised model line-up for the Territory range consists of a TS RWD, TS AWD, Ghia AWD and a Ghia Turbo AWD – the TX RWD, TX AWD and the FPV F6X will no longer be offered.

Major design changes include an all-new bonnet (for all bar the Ghia Turbo), with a complementary new front bumper, upper and lower grilles, new headlamps and a new fog lamp bezel.

New body coloured door handles, new chrome belt moulding, revised tail lamps and body coloured exterior mirrors are also part of the new exterior package.

Additional new design elements, which apply to both Ghia and Ghia Turbo models, include a new fender feature, turn indicators integrated into the side mirrors, side steps and privacy glass on rear passenger, rear side and tailgate windows.

New design alloy wheels feature across the entire Territory range.

The interior of the new Territory has also received a significant freshening, with new seat materials, colour finishers and trim highlights on all models.

The list of new items extends to Interior Command Centre (ICC) finishes, instrument panel spear colours and a new Shadow interior environment colour on all models.

Silver steering wheel buttons are another new touch for the new Territory and will be fitted as standard on TS, Ghia and Ghia Turbo models.

A host of additional equipment and features are now fitted as standard on the new look Territory range, further improving its competitiveness in the hotly contested SUV segment, as well as delivering a compelling value-for-money proposition for customers.

Territory TS becomes the entry level specification and gains a reverse parking camera and a third row seat as standard.

Ghia models also gain an Alpine rear DVD system, side steps, rear privacy glass and 18-inch alloy wheels, while the Ghia Turbo picks up the same list of additions and a new alloy wheel design (18 inch wheels are already standard fitment on the top-of-the-line Territory model).

All variants of the new Territory are now available in New Zealand except for the TS AWD, which will be introduced in October.
